THE WHOLE STORY.

Mrs. Labouchere and the Pidgeon Divorce pluro-pneumonia type.

The question of incorporating our Fully Discussed.

An Unhappy Marriage and a Man Who Beats His Wife-The Whereabouts

dents mentioned are new to American readers: The legal revelations recently made in America, through Eichmond correspondents, justify the publication of a few items that are within my knowledge, in reference to the extraordinary divorce suit which Mrs. Labouchere, otherwise Mrs. Pidgeon, has instituted in America. Miss Henrietta Hodson, as a girl, was a member of the stock company of the old Theatre Royal, at Bristol. Site played chiefly is burlesque and was the cleverest Aladdin in H. J. Byron's piece I remember to have seen. Miss Marie Wilton (Mrs. Bancroft) was the original, I believe, on its production original, I believe, on its production at the Strand Theater, London. Miss Hodson was the daughter of profes-sional parents of the highest respectability, and during her association with the Bristol Company she must have seen the first efforts of the Reynolds and Mrs. Kimball, then Mage Robert Notes of Interest from Denton-Personal son, who all began their artistic careers in the famous western city. MISS HODSON was petite, pretty, exceedingly grace-ful as a dancer and sang burlesque ditties with much taste and charm of manner. It is known that she might have made a most advantageous match had she desired to marry, but the Bristolian idea was that she preferred the stage and independence. The city was, therefore, not a little surprised when she elected to accept the matri-monial proposals of a Mr. Pidgeon, a lawyer and a widower with several children. Indeed her more faithful admirers were scandalized at the lady's want of taste. By and by there were rumors of something even worse than 'incompatibility of temperament' disturbing there lationships of the newly-married couple. said that Mr. Pidgeon had beaten

A woman of spirit, Mrs. Pidgon (who had, on her marriage, retired from the stage) determined to resume her professional engagements, and she went to London. Some people said this step was rendered here in London Mrs. Pidgeon's to that part of town.

The affairs of Fain, Perry & Shelton

The affairs of Fain, Perry & Shelton this step was rendered necessary on north and near the public square, which nection. An application for divorce was made by Mrs. Pidgeon. It was resisted by her husband, and the real estate and insurance firm. Mr. Labouchere, a rich banker, and a have not yet been arranged. ceed. But it was understood that a formal agreement of separation was made between the discontented wife and husband, whereby the latter received the solatium of an annual allow-

Mrs. Pidgeon lived with Mr. Labouchere, and those who knew her story sympathized with her and justified her conduct. She became gradually known as Mrs. Labouchere, and two or three years ago it was reported that Pidgeon had died and his widow had indeed become Mrs. Labouchere well. in the full acceptance of the law.

According to the statement made at Richmond the marriage was true, though it is not certain whether, accarding to the strict letter of the law, the parties have not committed bigamy. The question as to

MISS HODSON'S REAL POSITION

Was considered to be at rest a year or two since by her appearance in a tri-fling law suit in a local court. The mann. question at issue was one concerning the responsibility of Mrs. Labouchere for a small debt "contracted with a certain laundry company limited," which she had started somewhat after the manner of the New York Dress Association Company. But it was generally thought that the incident was merely arranged for the purpose of making known that Miss Hodson was in reality, Mr. Labouchere's wife.
She was called into the witness box and sworn as Henrietta Labouchere. The circumstance Labouchere. The circumstance was much commented upon in general society, and the lady received cards from one of the families which had not previously recognized her. At Bristol, however, I happen to know that the death of Pidgeon was questioned. and now t seems that the lady herself is in doubt on this point, and suggests that possibly the man committed some crime, on account of which he disappeared from England. The news of Mrs. Labouchere's proceedings at Richmond will fall like a bombshell in professional society, and the inference will be that to be a companion to Mrs. Langtry was not the chief cause of her visit to the United States. Since Mrs. Labouchere herself elects to submit her domestic story to the criticism of the public, it is only just to her to say that beyond the above incidents no item of reproach can be offered against her character. She married unwisely, was ill-treated, and found peace out-

A MISERABLE HOME.

No man could be a more devoted husband than Labouchere, and they live the happiest of lives. Labouchere is regarded by many people as a cynical, hard-hearted, depth-may-care individual, and it must be confessed that he poses somewhat as a misanthrope. Underneath his "waistband of steel, however, I venture to think there beats a kindly heart. He has suffered all along certain social disabilities on account of his wife, with a perfect sang froid and without a word of reproschor any apparent aunoyance.

"ARCHIES" STORY.

Remarkable Revelations in the Livingstone Breach of Promise Case.

A Coachman Makes Some Damaging Revelations-Proceedings for a New Trial.

New York, January 18.—The sensation produced by the breach of promise suit brought by Mary Alice Almont Livingstone against Henry Fleming, which resulted in the rendering of a verdict by the jury for $75,000, promises to be revived and increased tendering the content of the c fold by the extaordinary letters al-leged to be written by Miss Living-stone to a coachman named Archibald Cornelius, who was employed by Mr. Bliss, the stepfather of the complainant some years ago. The name of Cornelius was mentioned several times during the late trial in a somewhat un-pleasant connection with that of the fair plaintiff, but the latter swore she had never known any person of that name. As Justice Pratt, who tried the case, was out of town, Counselor Win, F. Howe, who appeared for the defendant, applied to Justice Edgar M. Cullen, of the supreme court, for a stay of proceedings in the action and for an order to show cause why the verdict for $75,000 should not be set aside, on the ground of newly discovered evidence in the case. In support of this application the affidavits of Henry Fleming, Adolph Anderson and Archibald W. Cornelius were submitted, together with a number of letters, which, it is said, were written by the latter to the plaintiff, and which will prove, if substantiated, a long continued intimacy be-tween Miss Livingstone and Cornelius. made an order to show cause, returnable on the 22d instant. The first chapter in this series of astounding revelations is the affidavit of Cornetius, which is substantially as follows: He deposes that he has known Mary Alice Almont Livingstone since 1878 that he first became acquainted with her at the place of Tom Piacide, at Toms River, N. J., when she came there up n a visit. At that time he was employed there. Placide died about 1879, after which Mr. and Mrs. Buss and Miss Livingstons came there to reside, and he continued in their employment until 1880. The deponent then details the circumstance connected with the beginning of his alleged intimacy with Miss Livingstone, which are unfit for publication. Their relations continued without interruption during the remainder of his residence with the family. He swears that the arrangement was that she should leave all letters for him under his pillow. The letters annexed, he swears, are all in her hand-writing and were received by him from her. Cornelius makes affldavit as follows:

The manner in which my relations with Miss Livingstone came to be found out by Mrs. Bliss was as follows: On a Sunday afternoon in June, 1880, Mr. and Mrs. Blbss and I had been over to the beach near Chadwlek's place, and when we came home Mrs. Bliss went into my room and found a letter written by Alice. Then there was a scene, and I left their employment that very day. I have frequently seen Mrs. Bliss since I have been away there. I only saw the girl, R N Wheelock and Miss Callie Cox. Miss Livingston, once since then. That Shelson and Miss Familie E was last November. I mean November, 1882. It was at the Continental Bliss called to where I was working WASHINGTON COUNTY-ISSUED FOR and told me to come to the Continental Hotel; that Alice wanted to see me. I went there and Alice and I went out for a walk. She began to tell me about this case and wanted me to tes-I told her I could not do that and then she asked me not to do her any harm. On one occasion Alice told John Pecha and Rosina Stratmach. me that Mr. Fleming was a very wealthy man and that her mother would get a divorce from Mr. Bliss and would then marry Mr. Fleming."

In support of his allegatious, Cornelius submits a number of letters, the Frederick Hupe and Henrietta Eck-first of which is addressed to "Dear man. Archie," and signed "Alice." She says the letters are becoming quite a necessity, and tells him that she is afraid that her mother has discovered something. "Let us be ready with our answers, and both say the same thing." Don't get angry or excited. Let us be very calm about it, as it is very hard to fool mamma. She wants to catch us if she can."

A number of other extracts are given, some of which are unfit for publica-tion. The following poetic effusion is among the documents:

DEAR FRIEND:—

If in some corner of your heart
A place for absent friends may be,
Then keep that little place for me,
"Fargive—forget!" were wisely told,
Is held a motto good and old;
But half the motto is better yet—
Then, ah! forgive, but don't forget.

A number of letters are annexed to the affidavit, "Archie" is warned again and again to be sure to tear up all the letters. She says in one letter:

"If ever you dare to mention them to any one now or her hereafter in life, I hope God will punish you most severely. In don't see why I tell you, except that I trust you above others, and besides I do long for some confidential friend to whom I can tell every-thing and have no fear of betrayal. All my life i have hunted and nover found one except you, and never will again, I amsure. God bless you! I owe you something for your devotion to me. I have tried you and found you true.'

Adolph Anderson makes affidavit that he found Archibald Cornelius, Mr. Fleming's deposition states that the letters are in the girl's handwriting. He says: "On Friday morning Anderson called at my office and pro-duced the letters which were attached to the affidavit of Archibald Cornelius, and asked me to take to my counsel and see whether the letters

COULD BE OF SERVICE to me. My counsel saw me and said: Anderson and we examined the letters and writings, and I here positively swear that each and every one of these letters which are produced with Cornelius' affidavit are in the handwriting of said Mary Almont Livingston, and with which handwriting I am well acquainted. I never have seen said Archie Cornelius since I saw him at Toms River long before the commencement of the action, until he came, together with Mr. Anderson, to the office of Hove & Hummel yesterday afternoon, and there made the affidavit, and until I saw the affidavit of said Cornellus | .ne

THE LIVER AND ITS FUNCTIONS.

Thus become a well established fact that the larger portion of diseases to which the human family is subject arise in the first place from some derangement of the Liver. This organ is not only the largest, but at the same time one of the most important. The venous blood, on its return to the heart, nasses through this organ, and in its passage the impurities, as also the secretions which are nonessay for diseasing seen that the Liver is limited.
